WOODSMEN'S WEEKEND

Woodsmen's Competitions were developed in the late 1940's under the leadership of Ross McKenny of Dartmouth College. The competitors in the first meet were Dartmouth, University of Maine and Kimball Unity Academy. The intent in holding these competitions was and is still to preserve our lumberjack heritage. The importance of this heritage lies in the resourcefulness of the Woodsmen. Their task was to provide wood to be used to build the structures of our growing nation. To accomplish this task by hand, they invented tools whose efficiency is even to this day the source of endless amazement. Today those quality saws can only be found lying in an old barn or antique shop as an ornamental relic. The axe heads, used in competition, must be obtained from Australia and then must be painstakingly filed so they will cut wood efficiently.

The interest in learning lumberjack skills has grown dramatically since the first meet of 1947. This year 36 teams from the Northeast and Canada will compete. These meets emphasize proficiency with the tools of the lumberjack and the comaraderie which is shared by all. For some 200 men and women who are competing, this meet is the focal point of the spring. On the behalf of Colby's Outing Club we hope that this meet and the following festivities will be enjoyed by all.
